

The comment section, especially after the beginning of Jan.2010, was flooded by advertisements , orders, or whatever, of some pharmaceutical material or something (for diabetes? Parkinson? It doesn't matter anyway). Since I don't want to spend my days checking and deleting nonsense messages one by one, I just remove the comment section, apologizing to the communicative among the site's readers (they will find within the site's pages ways to communicate with me if they run into paragraphs that are best read along with our concurrent communication), thanking them for their interest, and asking them to still mention this site to people who they think would have something to receive from it or to offer to it/John Alevizos, January 26 2010
