

The previous file being called “Upshot as Cover Letter” was already “upshot as opening to present and future”; who would write a cover letter that did not have that nature? But the present file is about things that, although overdue and matter-of-factly and rather self-evident, are still in the process of being formed around us and inside us from the haze (that, in our days, seems to be more around us than inside us). Like, in the file “Walking out from a theater to a forum”, we extricated the cover letter we saw from the context of the somewhat overly academic folder that here enfolded it and like we made it something one encounters at a forum that one frequents and sometimes gets together after a theater play, whether the people coming there to speak or to listen were sitting in the theater or not, similarly let’s extricate the present file from the present folder completely: let’s not write anything about it here and let’s leave it for a file placed even before the present folder, not needing the reading here at all to make sense. So we leave it to the file “Future concerns (from ’08 on). Brief and personal outline” that the reader may have already read.
